

Add Punctuation

This is a short story, but it does not have any punctuation.

Your job is to read the text and insert the correct punctuation, including capital letters, so that the sentences are easy to understand.

Story

if you ask people in Japan what's the best thing from their country they might say instant noodles sometimes called ramen instant noodles are enjoyed around the world where did they come from the history of instant noodles begins in Japan in 1957 Momofuku Ando was 47 years old at that time Japan was not a developed country some people didn't have enough food to eat

Ando wanted to make a new food it should be easy to make and not cost a lot of money he wanted to make instant noodles for one year he tried to make it nothing worked one day something good happened he put noodles in hot oil it worked well they became easy to eat after sitting in hot water for a few minutes he found a way to make instant noodles

people in Japan loved them five years later he went to America some business people tried his instant noodles he watched them eat and saw something interesting

the Americans put noodles in a cup that gave Ando another idea cup noodles in 1971 he made instant noodles in a cup it was a big seller

Ando died in 2007 many people remember Ando as the man who created a new and special Japanese food and it all started with a man and an idea

Answer

If you ask people in Japan what's the best thing from their country, they might say instant noodles. Sometimes called ramen, instant noodles are enjoyed around the world. Where did they come from?

The history of instant noodles begins in Japan in 1957.

Momofuku Ando was 47 years old. At that time, Japan was not a developed country. Some people didn't have enough food to eat.

Ando wanted to make a new food. It should be easy to make and not cost a lot of money. He wanted to make instant noodles. For one year, he tried to make it. Nothing worked. One day, something good happened. He put noodles in hot oil. It worked well. They became easy to eat after sitting in hot water for a few minutes. He found a way to make instant noodles.

People in Japan loved them. Five years later, he went to America. Some business people tried his instant noodles. He watched them eat and saw something interesting.

The Americans put noodles in a cup. That gave Ando another idea: cup noodles. In 1971, he made instant noodles in a cup. It was a big seller.

Ando died in 2007. Many people remember Ando as the man who created a new and special Japanese food. And it all started with a man and an idea.