

Rob Whyte's Writing Class

Articles and Nouns

1. A/An with a single, general countable noun. It's not specific, we don't know which one.
 - John went to the airport in a taxi.
 - The taxi was black and yellow.

In the first sentence we use A. Why, the taxi is not specific. It's any taxi. BUT in the second sentence, we're talking about one specific taxi. Which taxi? The taxi John was talking to the airport. That's why we use The in the second sentence.

Here's is another example.

- Hyun-chul wrote an email to his professor.
- The email said that Hyun-chul was going to be late for class tomorrow.

2. Don't use a/the with single non-count nouns. These are general things.

- Gasoline is expensive.
- Water is important.
- Rice is delicious.

BUT. Look at these sentences. These sentences talk about specific things. So we should use THE.

- The gasoline at Hyundai Oilbank is expensive.
- The water in Jinu is clean.
- The rice in this restaurant is delicious.

3. Use A with counters plus non-count nouns. In these sentences, use the same rules as #1.

- I have a bottle of vinegar in my bag.
- The bottle of vinegar cost 1,500 won at HomePlus.

4. Use THE when the reader knows what noun you are talking about.

- You should not look directly at the sun. (there is only one sun)
- Please close the door when you come in the class. (you come in only one door).

5. Don't use THE with plural nouns that mean ALL or IN GENERAL

- The LED signs are everywhere in Seomyeon. (X)
- LED signs are everywhere in Seomyeon.

If we make a small change, we need THE. Why do we use THE here?

- The LED signs in Seomyeon are bright at night.

6. Usually, don't use THE with proper names.

- I live in the Sajik-dong. (X)
- I talked with the Professor Whyte. (X)
- The Seoul is the capital city of the Korea. (X)

SUMMARY

Rules	Example
First time you talk about a general noun: use A/An with a single, general countable noun. Use THE second time.	I saw a dog. The dog was black.
Don't use A/THE with single, general non-count noun.	Espresso coffee is delicious.
Use THE with specific non count nouns.	The espresso coffee in France is delicious.
Use A or THE with counters plus non-count nouns	I see a bottle of wine on the table. The bottle of wine comes from France.
Use THE when the reader knows what noun you are talking about.	Open the window, please.
Don't use THE with plural nouns that mean ALL or IN GENERAL.	Oranges are my favorite breakfast food.
Don't use THE with proper names.	Homeplus is a large department store.
