

A Korean Fable

A long time ago in a Korea village, there lived a fool named Mr. Lee. One day, Mr. Lee won 100,000 won in a poker game. He was happy but nervous, so he wanted to hide his money. He found a great place. He dug a hole and buried the money far from home.

A few days later, he thought someone might find his money. So, he got a piece of paper, wrote a note on it and put the paper on the ground near his money. The note said, "100,000 won is not buried here."

Mr. Kim, an old man from the next village, knew Mr. Lee won some money and wanted to steal it. He found Mr. Lee's note and dug up the money. Then he got a piece of paper, wrote a note and put it on the ground. The note said, "Mr. Kim did not steal the 100,000 won."
